

Walk Like Cerberus

Being a 3-headed monster certainly has its advantages but can be troublesome at times too. Having three heads having to work together to achieve the same goal can be hard. Today you will have a chance to see what it is like to have three minds working together.

- 1.) Teams will line up behind the designated starting line.
- 2.) On the word go the students will race to stand on the buddy walkers as a team. Each person will put their left foot on one buddy walker and their right foot on the other.
- 3.) Each person will grab the ropes with their left hand and their right hand.
- 4.) In order to move the buddy walkers the three students must communicate as a team and take one step at a time in order to work their way toward the finish line.
- 5.) The students will go down around the cone and come back to give the buddy walkers to the next three people in line. This will continue until everyone has had a turn. First team to finish wins.
- 6.) Each time a team wins and event they earn 1 point for their group.
